

BRIEFING ON BUSINESS & HUMAN RIGHTS IN TANZANIA 2019 QUARTER 3&4: JULY-DECEMBER

The UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGPs) underline the role of governments and businesses in the protection and respect of human rights (Ref. E1). In their annual review, the Corporate Human Rights Benchmark Report (Ref. E2) observes that also in 2019 corporate progress on the implementation of the UNGPs is alarmingly low overall. Most companies seem to fail to show their respect for human rights. They lack the fundamental commitments and systems that are needed to prevent negative human rights impacts or to provide effective remedy in case harm was done. Human rights due diligence, which includes all the steps an organisation takes to identify, prevent, mitigate and account for adverse human rights impacts (Ref. E3), appears as a key weakness for most companies. To push practices of human rights due diligence on an international level, a second draft for a legally-binding treaty on business and human rights (Ref. E4) was presented by the UN in the second half of 2019. While an increasing amount of companies claim to be aware of their responsibility to respect human rights, it is time to raise the global bar on effective actions (Ref. E5).

States also have a key role to play in the achievement of the UNGPs. In November 2019, the annual UN Forum on Business and Human Rights was held under the theme "Time to Act: Governments as Catalysts for Business Respect for Human Rights." Discussions served to stimulate governments to demonstrate progress and commitment to putting the UNGPs in practice (Ref. E6).

Non-governmental (NGO) and civil society actors also fulfil a key role in holding stakeholders accountable to respect and protect human rights. By the end of 2019, national and international NGOs report increasingly repressive trends in Tanzania (Ref. E7), also with respect to human rights. Amendments to NGOs' regulation laws (Ref. E8) and arrests of human rights activists (Ref. E9) fuelled discontent. These allegations are disputed by government officials, who stress the significant progress made in the protection of human rights in the country (Ref. E10).

The following overview lists news from mid-June to December 2019:

RESOURCE EXTRACTION

Mineral resources are at the centre of the Tanzanian government's regulation effort to increase national revenue. To achieve this goal, the government is taking measures to curb illegal extraction (Ref. R1) and mineral smuggling (Ref. R2, Ref. R3). Extractive companies are being held accountable to pay their taxes (Ref. R4, R5) and to comply with labour regulation (Ref. R6). Besides focussing on industrial mining, the government is also increasingly regulating small-scale mining (Ref. R7). At the same time, the government endeavours to boost the extractive sector by, for instance, simplifying mineral dealing and exportations (Ref. R8), by revising tax regimes for small-scale miners (Ref. R3), by opening up revoked mining areas for tender (Ref. R9) and by stimulating the construction of Tanzania's first gold refinery (Ref. R10). A total of 28 mineral trading centres were also already set up to give small-scale gold miners easier access to a government-regulated market where they can directly and legally sell their production (Ref. R11). However, while the increase in revenue from these centres is evident, the benefits for small-scale miners are debated (Ref. R12). Access to markets remains an ongoing issue, not in the least for female miners (Ref. R13). To ensure they get a fair share of the profit in the sector, a responsible gemstone initiative centred around female miners was set up at the end of 2019 (Ref. R13).

The country's drive to optimise the extractive sector will create new opportunities. However, the sustainability and fairness of natural resource governance are essential to make sure it benefits the development of Tanzania and its communities. Legal trainings are one way to increase know-how and awareness within the government (Ref. R14) and communities influenced by the extractive sector (Ref. R15).

Communities living near large industrial mines show a widespread feeling of distrust towards industrial mining, as an in-depth survey in north-west Tanzania reveals (Ref. R16, R17). Communities feel that mining companies fall short in how they deal with the impacts and harm on local communities. The lack of meaningful engagement between industrial mining companies and communities further increase the lack of community confidence in those companies and promote feelings of marginalisation (Ref. R17). Moreover, contrasts between the sophisticated mining operations and the often-impoverished surrounding communities are immense and create disappointment towards the actions taken by mining companies to support local communities.

Overall, mining companies still see Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) activities as the best way to give back to communities (Ref. R18). Despite business and government initiatives, miners' safety and health (Ref. R19) as well as environmental protection are persistent challenges in the extractive sector. Deadly accidents are still a reality (Ref. R20) and mining pollution (Ref. R21) causes harmful effects on neighbouring communities (Ref. R22). Despite environmental laws, mining companies are still reluctant to share their mine closure plans (Ref. R23). To protect and respect human rights, all stakeholders need to make sure that 'do no harm' principles are the standard, instead of initiatives 'to do good' (Ref. R17).

AGRICULTURE

In Tanzania, 55% of the population and 75% of low-wage earners directly depend on the agriculture sector for their livelihoods. However, farmers still lack access to capital, markets (Ref. A1) and land (Ref. A2). Land issues often lead to protracted conflicts which affect communities' human rights and development. At the end of 2019, the government set up a special zone to resolve land conflicts in Morogoro, a region known for its conflicts between farmers and pastoralists (Ref. A3). Settling land disputes is essential to increase agricultural production, protect livelihoods and, hence, reduce poverty. The protection of the livelihoods of farmers and pastoralists could also be reinforced by initiatives such as crop (Ref. A4) and livestock insurance (Ref. A5).

The challenge for Tanzania is to maximize the benefits from its fertile land and waters while ensuring sustainable development for local communities. The fight against illegal fishing (Ref. A6) exemplifies this difficult balance. While the government dedicated important means to prevent fish stock depletion and considers its policy as a success (Ref. A7), law enforcement measures seem to have created tensions and violent clashes with fishing communities (Ref. A8).

Women play a significant role in the agricultural production but are still facing unequal economic opportunities and gender-based violence. Women land rights (Ref. A9) and awareness campaigns (Ref. A10) are key to protect women's physical and economical security. Child labour is equally concerning. The tobacco industry, for instance, is implementing environmental Corporate Social Responsibility activities (Ref. A11), but is still accused of relying on children for a large share of its production (Ref. A12).

TOURISM

Tanzania is home to a large natural wealth and has created numerous protected areas to preserve it. Conservation efforts go hand in hand with the growth of the tourism sector. As a result, wildlife trafficking (Ref. 11) and poaching (Ref. 12) represent a challenge for the Tanzanian tourism industry. The country is increasing its effort to limit wildlife smuggling (Ref. 13) especially through its ports (Ref. 14). The attention dedicated by the judicial system to high profile cases (Ref. 15) demonstrates the determination of the country to tackle this phenomenon.

Conservation also has its impacts on local communities. Human-wildlife conflicts are frequent due to the increase of both human and wildlife populations (Ref. T6). In areas surrounding protected areas, these conflicts can be fatal, as increasingly reported from Arusha, Manyara and Katavia regions (Ref. T7). Not only intruding wildlife can affect local livelihoods, community evictions in the name of conservation efforts are also disruptive. At the end of 2019, a 15-year old land conflict in Kagera region was ended without eviction (Ref. T8).

Wildlife hunting is responsible for the destruction of valuable wildlife and constitutes another source of conflict between tourism investors and local communities (Ref. T9). In an effort to regulate wildlife hunting, Tanzania decided to reduce the size of the Selous Game Reserve (Ref. T10) dedicated to hunting and to revoke the hunting permit of the Green Mile Safari company for violations of the hunting rules (Ref. T11).

INFRASTRUCTURE

Numerous large-scale infrastructure projects are in the works in the country, including the Standard Gauge Railway (Ref. I1), the Liquefied natural Gas Project (Lindi Region), Stiegler's Gorge hydropower project and The East Africa Crude Oil Pipeline. These investments are meant to ease the movement of people and goods and to boost the country's economic development.

On paper, these initiatives can generate Corporate Social Responsibility benefits, such as education and health initiatives (Ref. I2, I3). They are also supposed to comply with the country's environment laws (Ref. I4). Nevertheless, concerns remain. The Stiegler's Gorge Project should double Tanzania's electric production. Despite the president's reassurance, environmental organisations continue to express concerns about the potential damage of this hydropower project to the Selous Game Reserve's unique flora and fauna (Ref. I5, I6, I7).

Corruption is another concern in the sector. While water is a vital need, numerous water projects are facing diversions of public funds due to overpricing (Ref. 18), sabotage (Ref. 19) and dysfunction (Ref. 110). The conditions under which projects are executed have to be studied with specific attention in order to guarantee national and local benefits. As such, the Bagamoyo Port Project, to be implemented by Chinese investors, is carefully watched by the government (Ref. 111).

The scope of the 1,149 km long East Africa Crude Oil Pipeline (EACOP) represents potential human rights risk for the many communities along its pathway. The project is currently on hold due to negotiations in Uganda. In light of the delays in the execution of the project, the Tanzanian government allowed local communities to temporary use the land on the pipeline route (Ref. I12).

READING LIST

EDITORIAL

E1: Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights: Implementing the United Nations 'Protect, Respect and Remedy' Framework | Office of the High Commission on Human Rights (OHCHR) | 2011

This is the United Nations (UN) framework that indicates the roles and responsibilities of governments and businesses with regard to preventing and addressing corporate human rights harms. It is based around three pillars: (Pillar I) The state duty to protect human rights; (Pillar II) The corporate responsibility to respect human rights; (Pillar III) The access to remedy. The UN Guiding Principles (UNGP) are internationally agreed principles; however, they are voluntary principles and are not legally binding.

E2: 2019 Key findings Report | Corporate Human Rights Benchmark | 11.2019

The 2019 Corporate Human Rights Benchmark Assessment assessed 200 of the largest publicly traded companies in the world on a set of human rights indicators. It reveals that: (1) in aggregate, the 200 companies are painting a distressing picture: most companies are scoring poorly and the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGPs) are clearly not being implemented, (2) Human rights due diligence is a key weakness for most companies, (3) Encouraging progress for companies assessed multiple times, (4) Not all companies are 'in the race to the top', (5) Out of sight — out of mind: new companies scoring 17%, (6) Companies fail to show remedy and compensation for victims of abuse, (7) Transparency needs to improve — particularly for actual impacts and company practices, (8) Information and Communication Technology Manufacturing is lagging behind.

E3: Corporate human rights due diligence – identifying and leveraging emerging practice UN Human Rights Office of the High Commissioner

Human rights due diligence is a way for enterprises to proactively manage potential and actual adverse human rights impacts with which they are involved. It involves four core components: (a) Identifying and assessing actual or potential adverse human rights impacts; (b) Integrating findings from impact assessments across relevant company processes and taking appropriate action accordingly; (c) Tracking the effectiveness of measures; (d) Communicating on how impacts are being addressed with stakeholders.

E4: Legally binding instrument to regulate, in international human rights law, the activities of transnational corporations and other business enterprises | OEIGWG | 16.07.2019

Negotiations to develop a treaty on business and human rights kicked off on 6 July 2015 with the first meeting of the UN Human Rights Council's openended intergovernmental working group on transnational corporations and other business enterprises with respect to human rights (OEIWG), which has a mandate of elaborating an international legally binding instrument. In July 2018, the OEIWG released the first draft of the legally binding instrument being negotiated, also known as the "Zero Draft". On 16 July 2019, a "Revised Draft" was released.

E5: UN Global Compact 2019 Progress Report United Nations 2019

The United Nations Global Compact established a framework of Ten Principles to guide businesses in the areas of human rights, labour, environment and anti-corruption. The 2019 progress report demonstrates that mainstreaming the Ten Principles and the Global Goals in strategies and operations is still a major challenge for companies.

E6: UN Forum on Business and Human Rights highlights the importance of coherent policies | Investment Treaty News | 17.12.2019

From November 25 to 27, 2019, the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights hosted this year's United Nations Forum on Business and Human Rights in Geneva, Switzerland. The forum's mandate is to discuss trends and challenges in implementing the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGP), identify good practices, and promote dialogue and cooperation. The 2019 forum focused on the need for all governments to demonstrate progress, commitments and plans in moving the UNGP from paper to practice.

E7: Tanzania: Climate of Fear, Censorship as Repression Mounts | Human Rights Watch | 28.10.2019

Two reports from Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch point out that Tanzania's repression of the media, human rights defenders, and opposition parties has intensified since 2015. https://www.hrw.org/news/2019/10/28/tanzania-climate-fear-censorship-repression-mounts

E8: House passes criticised NGOs Law Amendment | The Citizen | 28.06.2019

Parliament passed amendments to the Written Laws redefining - among other issues - how non-governmental organizations (NGOs) should operate. While these amendments are presented as a chance for the government to ensure that NGOs undertake the operations in the line with the objectives for which they were registered, opponents see a possibility to exclude certain persons from the operations of NGOs.

E9: Notable Year for Human Rights Record in Tanzania | The Citizen | 29.12.2019

From a human rights perspective, the twelve months of the year 2019 are not seen by human rights activists to have borne fruit and made progress as far as respect for people's basic rights and freedom is concerned. Concerns on declining press freedom, the ban on political rallies, the push for an arrangement that would ensure a free and fair elections are some of the issues that continued to test the commitment of authorities in ensuring respect for human rights principles. https://www.thecitizen.co.tz/news/1840340-5400978-abb417/index.html

E10: Human Right Status superb, CHRGG says | Daily News | 12.12.2019

Unlike assertions from a section of the political class, the international community and other rights groups who were misleading people that they were increasing human rights violations, the chairman of the commission for human rights and good governance (CHRAGG) moved to refute those claims, insisting the country had made tremendous strides in protection of human rights i

R1: Ruby Explorers in Manyara face arrest | Habari Leo | 16.10.2019

Manyara Regional Commissioner (RC) Alexander Mnyeti has ordered the arrest of a ruby exploring and mining firm's officials over prolonged search of gemstones. RC Mnyeti accused the mining firm of spending long periods spanning over 20 years on the exploration of the gemstones, which is against the law. https://habarileo.co.tz/habari/2019-10-155da60ca47677f.aspx

R2: Madini yenye thamani ya sh. 1.3 bilioni yakamatwa (Minerals worth 1.3 billion seized) | Mwanachi newspaper | 14.07.2019

The Inspection and Monitoring Department on the minerals smuggling at Namanga border (Arusha) has caught minerals worth 3 billion Tanzanian shilling during the 2018/19 period, most of which were gemstones. As a comparison, minerals amounting more than 300 million Tanzanian shilling were caught being smuggled outside Tanzania unlawfully in 2017/18.

R3: PM Majaliwa warns minerals smugglers | The guardian newspaper | 23.09.2019

Prime Minister Kassim Majaliwa warned people including unfaithful business people involved in the smuggling of minerals out of the country to stop forthwith, as the government is very watchful and will have no mercy to pounce on them. To enhance production by small-scale miners, the government removed Value Added Tax of 18% and withholding tax of 5% for all minerals sold at local auctions.

R4: Mining firms in Tanzania on the spot over royalty fees | The East African | 17.09.19

Mining companies in Tanzania risk being denied transport permits to ferry their products if they have not adhered to section 18 of the country's Mining Act of 2010 (and revised in 2017), which requires all producers to pay royalty fees on the gross value of minerals produced. https://www.theeastafrican.co.ke/business/Mining-firms-Tanzania-royalty-fees/2560-5275030-rc3wubz/index.html

R5: Sakata kodi ya pango ardhi yaangukia mgodi (The hunt for land tax falls on Geita Gold Mine) | Habari Leo 12.07.2019

Special Operations by the Deputy Minister of Land, Housing and Residential Development, Dr Angeline Mabula were conducted to hold accountable, all institutions and companies which have not paid land tax. The Gold Mine (GGM) in Geita region has been affected and seems to have failed paying land tax due to an unappropriated land deed. https://www.habarileo.co.tz/habari/2019-07-125d28227173907.aspx

R6: Government closes down Tanzanite One Mine | Daily News | 28.07.2019

Following the breach of laws, the government took the decision to temporarily close the mining activities of Tanzanite One Mining Limited (TML), the world's biggest miner and supplier of Tanzanite. The company has been ordered to pay its more than 700 employees their salaries for the past 22 months. https://dailynews.co.tz/news/2019-07-285d3d5810b9ed5.aspx

R7: Tanzania's extractive sector reaps from reforms | The East African | 30.12.2019

Tanzania's extractive industry turned around its fortunes in 2019 as the country embarked on reforms to boost revenue collection. Despite the reforms, the government can still reap more from the mining sector. https://www.theeastafrican.co.ke/business/Tanzania-extractive-sector-reaps-from-reforms/2560-5401626-y7ssql/index.html

R8: Tanzania Government to simplify minerals regime | The Citizen | 08.09.2019

The government has announced two measures aimed at simplifying mineral dealing and ease its exportation. "However, this does not mean that the government will stop controlling mineral business as we want transparency and ensure the government earns its rightful share" said Mr Biteko. https://www.thecitizen.co.tz/news/1840340-5264804-9bwm8i/index.html

R9: Tenders to be floated over ownership of 10 mining areas | The Citizen | 19.12.2019

10 mining areas with Retention Licences (RL), which have been repossessed by the government, will now be allocated through floating of tenders for projects on nickel, gold and rare earth elements. "Among other things, an investor interested in investing in those areas will be obligated to work as well as to develop artisanal miners" the Mining Commission chairman said. https://www.thecitizen.co.tz/news/Tenders-to-be-floated-over-ownership-of-10-mining-areas/1840340-5392002-j64c1n/index.html

R10: Tanzania's First Gold Refinery Plant Underway | Daily News | 23.09.2019

The project to establish a major gold refinery plan in the mineral-rich Geita region is designed to increase revenues and jobs as well as promote modern technologies to realise maximum benefits from the mineral sector. https://dailynews.co.tz/news/2019-09-235d886afda9e2f.aspx

R11: Trading centres boost Tanzania's mining sector | The Citizen | 19.12.2019

These government-controlled selling and buying centres are part of President John Magufuli's drive to optimize mineral trading to benefit not just multinationals but also small-scale miners, brokers and dealers. Currently there are 28 operational trading hubs in the mineral-rich areas of Mwanza, Geita, Chunya, Arusha, Namanga, Singida Sekenke, Dar es Salaam, Kahama, Shingyanga, Ruvuma, Katavi, Tanga, Iringa, Manyara, Singida, Dodoma, Kigoma, Tabora, Mbeya, Mara and Songwe. https://www.thecitizen.co.tz/news/1840340-5301050-9r8uhi/index.html

R12: Gold rush? Not for us say Tanzania's small-scale miners | Reuters | 30.10.2019

A new network of government-controlled trading centres was meant to ensure Tanzania's small-scale miners got a bigger share of the country's mineral wealth. But most still can't get a foot in the door. Literally. Entering the exchanges is restricted to those who can afford the license needed to sell gold. Concerns are being raised on dealers becoming obstacle to fair prices for miners. https://www.reuters.com/article/us-tanzania-mining-artisanal-feature/gold-rush-not-for-us-say-tanzanias-small-scale-miners-idUSKBN1X90G0

R13: Moyo Gemstones' initiative to ensure female gemstone miners get a fair share of profit |Business & Human Rights Resource Centre|13.11.2019

One third of Tanzania's miners are female. However, they often know the least about gemstones and this puts them at a disadvantage when selling gemstones. Moyo Gemstones is a global collaboration between the non-governmental organisation Pact, Anza Gems, Nineteen48, Tanzania Women Miners Association (TAWOMA) and Everledger. It is the world's first responsible coloured gems programme.

R14: Tanzanian lawyers groomed on extractive sector industry | The Citizen | 19.09.2019

Tanzania is seeking to boost maximum utilisation of resources to benefit its people, yet there are only few lawyers who are competent enough to analyse extractive industry contracts and advise the government appropriately at the time of signing. The Tanganyika Law Society (TLS and the Canadian Bar Association (CBA) organised a training program to equip policy actors with knowledge on best practices and standards in resource management. https://www.thecitizen.co.tz/news/Tanzanian-lawyers-groomed-on-extractive-sector-industry/1840340-5280246-ywrwjdz/index.html

The initiative provided advocacy training to 65 lawyers working in civil society, legal aid, community-based agencies as well as regulators, professors and parliamentarians. The goal was to increase sustainable economic growth for East Africans, particularly women and vulnerable groups, affected by extractive industries, a statement from the firm said. https://www.lawtimesnews.com/news/general/norton-rose-canada-lawyers-offer-sustainable-development-training-to-lawyers-in-east-africa/321368

R16: As Tanzania Confronts Its Industrial Miners, What Do Locals Think? |African Argument | 25.09.2019

Discussions on mining reforms tend to focus on macro-economic factors as the industry's contribution to national revenue while less attention is paid to the impact of mining on local development. Surveys of communities around large-scale mines in northwest Tanzania reveal widespread feelings of distrust, marginalisation and reports of violations. https://africanarguments.org/2019/09/25/as-tanzania-confronts-its-industrial-miners-what-do-locals-think/

R17: Dissecting the social license to operate: local community perceptions of industrial mining in northwest Tanzania | IPIS | 28.08.2019

Communities living around extractive operations arguably have most to win and lose from the mining industry. To bring the voices of these communities to the centre of the debate, IPIS conducted surveys on community perspectives in 32 villages nearby six industrial mines in northwest Tanzania. Results show a low community confidence in industries' governance as well as a low satisfaction regarding corporate accountability. Allegations of serious human rights violations highlight the need for procedural fairness. http://ipisresearch.be/publication/dissecting-social-license-operate-local-community-perceptions-industrial-mining-northwest-tanzania/
